Make Safety a Habit

Attend one of Saskatchewan's esteemed luncheons in support of North American Occupational Safety and Health (NAOSH) Week's 20th Anniversary.

Featuring Guest Speaker:
Dan Comiskey

This inspirational keynote looks at ways to improve safety issues in the workplace environment by encouraging proper leadership skills and habit change. Dan explains how innovations in brain science challenge common assumptions about habit change.

According to Dan: "You're either leading by example or you're misleading by example."

Dan Comiskey played football in the Canadian Football League for 12 years earning two Grey Cup rings. During this period, he had over 40 different coaches. The wisdom of these coaches and Dan's ability to adapt taught him the fundamentals of habitual change. He is now an expert on habit change.

During his career Dan had to deal with the loss of his step-brother who passed in an industrial incident. He also helped his father-in-law, who suffered a permanent brain injury in the workplace less than one year from retirement. Dan personally suffered multiple concussions, a torn tricep, a torn calf and a broken leg during his professional football career. Dan has a very personal perspective on the importance of safety rules, safety communication and the importance of attention to Safety in the Workplace. He's passionate about it.
